New York Times Account Reauthorization

If you already have a NYTimes.com account via Emory, follow these steps to reauthenticate your account for online and mobile device access. NOTE: If you do not do this, you will experience hitting a paywall.

From the Goizueta Business Library’s website, click the NYTimes.com database blue button. You will be prompted to authenticate with your Emory NetID/Password.

Find School: search and select Emory University-Atlanta, Ga
Log in with your Emory.edu email and your existing NYTimes password.
What type of user are you?

- Student – you must select your Graduation Year
- Faculty/Staff/Administrator

The New York Times

Log In

Don't have an account? Create one »

Username or Email Address
Password
Show

What type of user are you?
- Student
- Faculty/Staff/Administrator
- Other/Non-Academic

Graduation Year

Alternate Email Address

Remember me

Log In

Your app and online access should now resume.

FAQs

1. What should I do if I experience any problems with this process?
   a. Email gbsaskalibrarian@emory.edu or call NYTimes Customer Care at 800-591-9233.

2. Once I graduate, when will my account be turned off?
   a. Sept. 30 of your graduation year

3. If I’m a faculty or staff, when will my registration expire?
   a. Every 52 weeks after your initial registration, you will need to reauthenticate. When you experience hitting the paywall (e.g. articles are “locked”), just click on the registration link, click Already have an account? Log in here and log in with your Emory.edu email and your existing NYTimes password. Your access will resume uninterrupted for another 52 weeks.

Updated: 4/26/2019 4:28 PM