Locating Electronic Academic Journals at Emory Libraries

Trying to locate an academic journal for which you have a citation? Use Access Journals (formerly eJournals@Emory). This handout walks you through this process.

If you experience any problems or Emory does not subscribe to the publication, please email gbsaskalibrarian@emory.edu and one of the business librarians will help you.

1. Click on Access Journals (formerly known as eJournals@Emory) on the Goizueta Business Library home page, or go directly to http://ejournals.emory.edu/

2. Type the journal name into the Find e-Journal by Title search box; click Search.

3. If Emory subscribes to the e-journal, a linked journal name will display. Click the Online Resource link to display the source(s) where the e-journal is accessible. Note the date information (available from...) to ensure a match with your article date. Click on one of the source links.

If access is available via the Publisher's site (vs. a database such as JSTOR), that link will typically appear at the top of the list.
4. Clicking on the source link will bring you to the Emory authentication page. Log in using your Emory Usernet/id and password.

5. Once at the journal source, look for a link to previous or archived issues.

6. Drill down for the year/volume/issue until you locate your article.
